It has the ability to "auto-generate" data/fixtures/setup code for you. What I find annoying is that I have to manually do it for every single test (imagine a test for creating a user with a password...). NCrunch seems to be basically an xml-based replacement for that. The problem is that I don't see a way to configure the tests to use the generic setup code for the class instead of having to configure each test by hand. There's no way to do something like this: [TestClass] public class UserServiceTest : MyBaseClassTest { //... } Is there a way to do this or is NCrunch completely incompatible with this type of testing? A: NCrunch do
