DNG for PowerShot-2 is an application that helps you convert Canon PowerShot RAW files into DNG format. It supports DNG v2.0. What is DNG? DNG (Digital Negative) is an XML-based format for representing unprocessed RAW images on computers. DNG specifications are defined by an International Organization for Standardization (ISO) committee. It is an open format that offers a standardized metadata framework for representing the image file's information. It allows providing the information about the image such as camera maker, focal length, exposure time, date, exposure mode, sensor type, color space, exposure, white balance, camera calibration values, sensor size, camera model and so on. Furthermore, the DNG standard also supports all the embedded metadata for each image. This helps the readers to find their captured images very quickly. It is a fully open data format. At this moment, DNG is still only used in Canon cameras. You can read more information about DNG here. What's new in DNG4PS-2: Version 2.0 improves the stability of the application.
