However, I'm disappointed with the lack of updates to the software and the key features.Q: Git: Is it possible to use git commands on untracked files in a repository? What I mean is that if we have a repo A that has files x.txt and y.txt. If we commit these two files, they're added to the repo and a commit is made to A. Then, if we create another repo B that has only files x.txt and y.txt, with git status, these are all untracked and listed as "untracked files", so we can't use git add to add these files. However, we then have a third repo C that has only the files x.txt and y.txt. So, if we commit C, the files should be added to the commit, and when we go to A, it will look to see if C was updated. e79caf774b
