A: Part 1: You can change the default command-line if you are using the command-line version of Greenshot, but that's not really recommended; and you have to remember to always copy the changed values to the other versions as well. The setting is located in the registry under HKEY_CURRENT_USER\Software\Greenshot. The Settings section contains the following sub-keys: Command line Path Command line argument Path argument Do not show command line prompt You need to change the value of the Do not show command line prompt key if you do not want to see the command line prompt when you use the Greenshot command-line tools. Part 2: More in-depth information on how to use the command-line version of Greenshot can be found here. Part 3: If you are using the GUI, you need to find the option under Greenshot → Preferences → Windows → Starting. I believe this option should be set by default, however. I'm also pretty sure there's an option in the Behaviour section. The goal of this proposal is to establish a new center of excellence for NIDDK's National Diabetes Research Program. We are proposing such a center at the University of Pittsburgh, which has an established history of strong involvement in diabetes research. The applicant is an Endocrinologist with an established record of academic productivity, and a proven ability to develop and lead research programs. The other investigators are major contributors to diabetes research, and members of the proposed Center will ensure its leadership and high scientific quality. Diabetes is a major public health problem and clinical research has the potential to substantially improve the care of patients with this disease. Our Center will work to develop novel therapies for the treatment of diabetes and its complications and will emphasize the translation of basic discoveries to the clinic. Diabetes research is highly interactive and effective collaborations between basic scientists and clinicians are essential to make advances in this field. The Center will have 5 cores and 1 project. The cores will provide assistance with the development, maintenance and progression of projects. The Administrative Core will be the administrative entity to manage the program. The Biostatistics Core will provide assistance with study design, sample size, statistical calculations, and analyses of clinical and basic data. The Cellular and Molecular Biology Core will make available the needed expertise to perform assays, tissues, cell lines, and transgenic animals. The Bioinformatics Core will develop computer models for the identification of new therapies for diabetes
