1. Open up a new file in Photoshop and set it up for editing. In this step, you'll make adjustments to the image in the layers panel of the Layers palette, which is on the left of the main screen (not visible in this image), as shown in the lower-right area of Figure 3-7. To open this image, choose File⇒Open. Set the options in the opening dialog box to Pictures/JPG, and then click Open. If the first image doesn't open up properly, ensure that the settings are as follows: Format/Compression: JPEG, Quality: 40-80, and Size: Large. If the image still won't open up properly, try again using the file you just opened or another file that you've opened before. 2. Open the Layers palette. In the Layers palette, make sure that the main window is set to the Background layer. Click the New Layer button (the + sign) to add a new layer to the image. 3. Create the adjustment on the new layer using the tools in the tools palette on the left side of the image window. 4. Click the Move Tool and use the Horizontal and Vertical Tabs on the Horizontal and Vertical Guides to align the adjustment with the image. Be sure to select the adjustment with the Rectangular or Elliptical Selection Tool before clicking and dragging. Drag the adjustment to the image with the mouse. 5. Create a new adjustment on the layer beneath the Background layer by clicking the New Layer button again. 6. Duplicate the image adjustment on the new layer. In this step, you'll duplicate the adjustment you just made using the Select and Copy commands (Ctrl+C or Cmd+C) so that the adjustment will appear on every background layer that already has an adjustment. 7. Back in the first layer, right-click and choose Paste from the shortcut menu. Be sure that the duplicate layer is the current layer, and be sure to check the Transparent check box when pasting so that it pastes into the transparent portions of the layer. 8. To make the adjustment completely transparent, click the Paint Bucket icon (it looks like a bucket with a drop of paint in it) located in the toolbox and then click the Adjustment layer.

Q: UART configuration of uboot on Raspberry Pi I am working on a project where I have a raspberry pi and I need to connect a arduino micro-controller to it for controlling via UART, I want to use the raspberry pi as a 'GPIO server' by taking in the values (from arduino) and sending to the GPIO pins. I have been googling and found out that UART is the best option for this purpose. I have also been googling and found a lot of UART configurations but I am not able to understand how to write it properly. Please help me out. A: So you have an Arduino connecting to a Raspberry Pi. That means that when you use the UART you will need two RX and two TX pins, on the Raspberry Pi, one for the Arduino and one for your own UART. UART is a serial protocol so all you need to do is send a characters to the other side using a recieve character (one character per byte) So lets get started with the Arduino side. You'll need to first determine which of your pins are RX and TX, then connect that pin to your UART on the Raspberry Pi, then do the same for the other side. So lets first start with the Arduino side // ADC #define ADS1222_PIN 13 #define ADS1222_RPORT 9 #define ADS1222_WPORT 10 // TP #define TP_PIN 15 #define TP_RPORT 9 #define TP_WPORT 10 // 5V #define 5V_PIN 8 // Setup Serial Serial.begin(9600); // Set WiFi WiFi.begin(ssid, password); // Set Sender ID WiFi.setAutoConnect(true); WiFi.setAutoReconnect(true); WiFi.setAutoReconnectInterval(30); WiFi.setAutoReconnectDelay(500); // Set for "Broadcast " WiFi.print("broadcast"); Serial.print("Scanning for "); Serial.print(ssid); if (Wi
