Despite apparent protective effects of statins, there have been no published estimates of the relationship between statin use and risk of hip fracture. We used the Medicare 5% sample data for 2004 to estimate the relationship between statin use and risk of hip fracture. We identified 2,686,759 Medicare beneficiaries aged 65 years or older who were covered by fee-for-service insurance for a full year and who had no history of hip fracture before the index date (i.e., the first date of the year of cohort entry). Statin users and nonusers were matched by age, sex, residence, income, and comorbidity, and we excluded 4,101 beneficiaries with missing information on statin use, resulting in 1,683 matched pairs. During follow-up, 6,195 hip fractures occurred. Compared with
