Bustamante fase15. 15. i ran 46. There is also a pdf of the full book. The PDF files contain every equation, figure, and illustration in the book. When you open the PDF file in a program such as Adobe Acrobat, they open in the "viewer" window. The entire file is "zoomable," so that you can see the whole book at once. If you have a program for opening PDF files that is not the "Acrobat Reader," then you will need to print out the PDF files and hand-fill in the information. Is the ebook broken? The first error I noticed was that the PDF file did not have a page number. You can fix this by downloading Acrobat, running Adobe Acrobat Reader, and then saving the PDF file with your revised cover page added. I had a similar problem. I'm afraid I can't help you, since my version of Adobe Acrobat only runs on a Mac. The closest thing I can find is something called the Adobe Scanner. You can use it in conjunction with the Adobe Acrobat. It will then add the page number to the PDF. A little extra work for a small fee? I have a job which gather some informations when someone clone a repository. The informations are stored in database. The job works like: When I clone a repository If the checkout is a branch, execute my function If the checkout is a tag, store the informations in database Here, this information is perfectly stored if the checkout is an branch. But, if the checkout is a tag, the job executes (in the right moment) but the informations are not stored because the checkout is a tag and not a branch. How can I modify my code to store the informations from my function if I'm on a tag? A: You should just use a post-receive hook on the repository to run the task you want to run: post-receive This hook is run after the repository has been cloned, and there are no local changes to be made to the working tree (if --one of the remote tracking branches that were pushed is checked out) or staged (if no --git-dir option was specified when pushing) Your post-receive hook can then detect if the git directory has changed on the basis of the SHA-1 of the branch/tag
