ABSOLUTELY required app with an optional premium version for more advanced functionality. This app is a display driver for Final Draft, the arguably best writing software on the market. Adobe also offers a collaborative and non-destructive writing app called DWF Writer. While it cannot be denied that this app has a tremendous amount of power, there is no practical reason to use it for anything other than writing and formatting, as most non-writing photo editing tasks can be handled with other products. While this is the first time I've used the Photoshop CC 2018 extension by the name "Panorama," I had a similar experience with the Panorama tool in the previous version of the software. The app always does the same thing: it tessellates a polygonal area into a single stitched image. I know very little about machine learning, although I hear a lot about it these days. However, I can say that this online advertising is very creepy, even if it is well-meaning. At the same time, I find it amazing how many ads try to sell premium upgrades for this app. I could see this being great if you had a team that was using both design tools and were constantly editing these files. For example, I could see having word processors and then having Photoshop CC that you could collaborate on in a much more efficient way. Workflows that work across platforms are extremely important to the modern creative industry. Using technology in the most efficient way possible in order to be more productive and save time is the sure way to success for any designer.
